

Zhengzhou Commodity Exchange (ZCE) Internship Application Packet Summer 2020

Program Description

The Weissman Center offers a summer 2020 internship opportunity at the ZCE in Zhengzhou, China, for qualified Baruch College students. The ZCE Internship Program will place a lower Senior or Graduate level student in one of the following ZCE departments: Department of Agricultural Products, Department of Non-Agricultural Products or Futures Derivatives Department. Two spots are available.

The Commodity Exchange Internship Program is an exciting opportunity for a Baruch College student seeking professional experience within an international work experience. The internship provides valuable experience in the following areas:

- Basic organizational structure and job functions of each department at a commodity exchange.
- Relevant rules and regulations and internal management of a commodity exchange.
- Procedures on how to conduct different tasks relating to the exchange.
- Daily routines of assigned department, such as assisting with collecting, analyzing data and other materials about commodity indices and other research materials, search & collecting and completing revision for data regarding relevant materials and industries, and collecting and translating data and other materials of overseas derivatives market, etc.
